Board approves request Ribeau attends first meeting of Trustees

The BG News

The approval of a state-funded capital request summary highlighted President Sidney Ribeau's first Board of Trustees meeting Friday.

The Trustees approved a $19,596 state-funded capital request that included seven projects. Improvements for the Health Center, University, Hanna and Moseley halls were included in the plan.

Trustee David Bryan said an important priority is phase one of the network infrastructure project.

"I think it was the sense of the committee that priority number five, the network infrastructure phase one, is a very important one," Bryan said. "The sense was that it is an awfully important project."

Ribeau began his first report to the Trustees by thanking them for the chance he has been given as president.

Governor George Voinovich has appointed a new student voice to the Bowling Green Board of Trustees. Jason Bristol, a junior environmental policy major, said he is honored to be the new student trustee.

A non-voting member of the board, Bristol said he is looking forward to his two-year term on the Board.

"I think it is going to supplement my education and add to my experience at Bowling Green," Bristol said. "My goal is to be an asset to the board when they have issues or question when they need to take the students' view into account."

Bristol, who replaces Jodi Chappell, said he has learned a lot in his first few months on the board.

Marilyn makes way for looting

CHARLOTTE AMALIE, U.S. Virgin Islands -- The yachts that used to be in the marina are on the highway. The red roofs of houses are strewn on the ground. The duty-free shops where tourists used to look for bargains are filled with looters.

Hurricane Marilyn has moved on from St. Thomas, but the Caribbean island that it left behind was a changed place Sunday.

Electricity, water and phones were out. Air traffic controllers, the windows of their tower blown out by 100-mph winds, used binoculars and radios to guide in relief flights. A quarter of the houses on the island were destroyed, and nearly all the others damaged.

In Charlotte Amalie, capital of the U.S. Virgin Islands, hundreds of people looted stores at a waterfront shopping center. No policemen were in sight.

"These are all odd shoes, man," said a young man at a Foot Locker store. "I can't find something that fits."

The hurricane, the fourth to hit the Caribbean in as many weeks, tore through the Virgin Islands and eastern Puerto Rico on Saturday, blowing apart homes, tossing parked airplanes into the air and killing as many as nine people.

Six people were killed on St. Thomas, home to 51,000 people. On St. Croix, the most populous of the Virgin Islands with 55,000 people, two people died. One person was killed in Puerto Rico.

President Clinton declared the U.S. Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico disaster areas, making them eligible for federal emergency aid.

Seven military transport planes landed Sunday on St. Thomas with the first relief supplies for island residents -- plastic sheeting, water, telephone equipment, emergency medical supplies.

In St. Thomas, many buildings lost their facades, gaping open like dolls' houses. FEMA at first said half the island's houses were destroyed, but later said a quarter were destroyed and another 75 percent damaged.

Marilyn blew out the windows of St. Thomas' hospital and flooded it, making it virtually unusable. Doctors were trying to care for 49 patients, including nine critically injured in the storm and four on life-support units with erratic generator power, said Dr. Manuel Guzman.

Eight patients were evacuated Sunday, all by helicopter because debris blocked the road to the airport. Tin sheets from roofs lined the highway.

UN extends Serb withdrawal time

The Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina -- NATO and the United Nations on Sunday gave the Bosnian Serbs an extra 72 hours to remove heavy weapons around Sarajevo.

Western commanders extended a deadline of 10 p.m. (4 p.m. EDT) Sunday evening, saying the Serbs showed "initial compliance" with demands to pull the artillery and other heavy weapons back at least 12 1/2 miles from Sarajevo.

"Therefore, we agreed that the suspension of the air-strikes be extended for an additional 72 hours," said a statement by NATO commander Adm. Leighton Smith and U.N. commander Lt. Gen. Bernard Janvier of France.

"It is our common judgment that the Bosnian Serbs have shown a substantial start towards withdrawing their heavy weapons beyond the limits of the exclusion zone," the statement said.

It didn't say how many weapons the Serbs withdrew by the 10 p.m. deadline Sunday night, but Bosnian government radio put the figure at about 150. The Serbs were thought to have had around 300 heavy weapons surrounding the Bosnian capital.

The second 72-hour period ends at 10 p.m. (4 p.m. EDT) on Wednesday.

Hours before the extension, U.S. Defense Secretary William Perry said Bosnian Serbs had picked up the pace of withdrawal.

Perry, speaking to reporters in the former Yugoslav republic of Slovenia, said NATO warned the Serbs late Saturday that they were moving too slowly.

"Today, some escalation has, in fact, occurred," Perry said. U.N. and NATO generals would be deciding later Sunday whether to extend the deadline, he said.

"I expect, and certainly hope, that they will be able to continue the suspension of the bombing," Perry said.

AP reporter Jovana Gec, on a tour organized by Bosnian Serb officials, saw about 60 pieces of heavy weaponry near the edge of the 12 1/2-mile zone, heading away from Sarajevo.

The convoys -- one heading south and one heading west -- included tanks, howitzers, mortars, multibarrel rocket launchers, anti-aircraft guns and ammunition.

"I feel like crying," a Bosnian Serb soldier yelled from atop a departing tank.

Miss Oklahoma receives birthday surprise, crowned Miss America in 75th anniversary of ceremony

The Associated Press

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. -- Miss Oklahoma Shawntel Smith got the birthday present many young girls only dream about Saturday: She was crowned Miss America.

But she had to share her party. Swimsuits took center stage as viewers voted overwhelmingly to retain the controversial swimsuit competition, in keeping with 75 years of pageant history.

Smith blew kisses to the crowd, mouthed thanks to the judges and blinked back tears after her name was announced. "I don't believe this," she appeared to say before Heather Whitestone pinned the crown on her shimmering red hair. Then she took a victory walk down the runway in a beaded white gown.

"I could not have gotten a better birthday present than this," she said later.

She said her victory would mean much to Oklahomans still recovering from the April 19 bombing of the federal building in Oklahoma City.

"I'd like to take the opportunity to tell everyone in the United States, thank you so much for coming together in a time of need in my state. We received so much support and so many prayers from other people around the nation," Smith said.

Miss Oregon Emily John Orton was first-runner up, followed by Miss Arkansas Paula Gaye Montgomery, Miss California Tiffany Stoker, and Miss Illinois Tracy Hayes.

Most of this year's contestants said they supported the swimsuit competition. Opponents included the outgoing Miss America.

"If you're competing for a scholarship and a job to become a spokesperson for your platform, you should be judged on your heart and mind and how you handle yourself, not on how you wear swimsuits," Whitestone, the first deaf Miss America, said Friday.

Smith was pro-swimsuit.

"Personally, I feel the suit is modest enough that I don't think I'm compromising any of my beliefs or values," said Smith, adding that the tradition helps show off contestants' physical fitness. The 10 finalists donned red swimsuits for their barefoot walk down the runway.

Smith, who turned 24 Saturday, was the first woman in her family to graduate from college. She earned a business administration degree from Northeastern State University.

In the talent competition, she sang "Woman in the Moon."

The others in the top 10 were Miss Alabama Leigh Sherer, Miss Mississippi Monica Louwerens, Miss New York Helen Goldsby, Miss Kansas Amy Beth Keller and Miss Massachusetts Marcia Turner.

Women's issues still unresolved

When the United Nations announced Beijing as the location of the Fourth World Conference of Women many were appalled, wondering how a country with such a poor record of women's rights could be chosen to host the event.

Next, sides were drawn on the issue of whether or not Hillary Clinton should travel to Beijing to represent the United States at the conference or boycott the event. Many called for a boycott not only because of China's poor history of rights for women but also due to the imprisonment of United States citizen and human rights critic Harry Wu, who was released before Clinton confirmed her participation in the conference.

The News believes that it was important for Clinton to attend the conference on behalf of the United States. More than 180 countries were represented at the conference and Clinton's presence was an unmistakable statement of where the United States stands on women's rights.

However, now that the conference has drawn to a close, what actually has been accomplished remains to be seen.

Less than one-fifth of the conference's Platform for Action remained under debate when the conference ended Friday. Although this may sound positive, when it is picked apart issue by issue, the results are less impressive.

Issues such as bride burning, female infanticide, rape and economic distribution were overwhelmingly condemned by delegates. Although it is important that these very real issues were addressed, it seemed evident that most delegates in attendance would oppose them while more controversial issues such as reproductive rights, gay rights and sex education made up the one-fifth of the platform that remained under debate when the conference closed Friday.

Furthermore, even though conference delegates were in agreement on most of the women's rights issues, no plan was discussed to find a way to end these unfavorable practices.

In the end, women's rights can not be guaranteed on a global scale. Conferences are important to draw attention to what is currently wrong and although a consensus may be reached, it cannot be enforced.

It takes the efforts of individual countries to make a difference in women's rights on a global scale. But within each country, it's up individuals to take a stand and make a difference.

Animals deserve benefits

Despite the fact that deer are extremely quick animals, they are no match for my Mercury Sable. You see, last year I had my hunting license revoked (as if I was the first person in history to forget I was in a public zoo), but they let me keep my driver's license - oh, come on, take a joke! I'm not being serious! I drive a Mustang!

Anyway, I did hit a deer this weekend. Unfortunately, it was while I was rollerblading, so I sustained most of the injuries, including a big antler-gash in my left butt cheek. Needless to say, words were exchanged, fists were thrown, and I learned firsthand that deer know how to give a really mean noogie. After a while, though, I realized you can't give a wedgie to a woodland animal that doesn't wear pants, so I offered to buy him a beer and that was that.

I started thinking, though, how rough life can be for your average animal, considering the fact that they have no say in our government. After a few more Flaming Taxis (a drink made with Hershey's chocolate, apple juice and a lot of cough syrup), I realized that animals don't WANT to be involved in government, due to the fact that they don't have to pay any taxes.

That made me think about how many taxes we pay already, and how unfair the system can be. Almost everything we buy today has a ton of taxes on it, from sales taxes to transportation taxes to foreign tariffs. And why, you may ask, do we pay all these taxes? The answer is simple: the government spends more than it earns.

This, however, is not the end of the world. It is the end of Wisconsin, considering it will be the first state sold to Canada in an effort to raise money, but most people really won't be able to tell the difference. Both places are cold, sparsely populated and be-paid for with a sin tax, the idea being that smokers and drinkers would a.) pay for the stadium, and b.) be discouraged from drinking and smoking. It didn't really work, but stupid people might be more receptive if we made the taxes outrageous.

Let's take infomercials, for example. I don't know about you, but I've seen the stupidest things in my life on Channel 36 at three in the morning:

CHEERY MALE HOST WEARING GAUDY SWEATER: Hi there, folks, and welcome back to "I'm Bald and Desperate, I'll Do Anything to Cover My Scalp, I'll Even Duct Tape a Kitten to My Head," the show where we show YOU how to look like a dork.

EXTREMELY ATTRACTIVE FEMALE HOST WEARING A REALLY SHORT SKIRT IN ORDER TO ATTRACT LOSERS TO THE SHOW: Um, yes!

CHEERY MALE: Well, guys, life can be pretty hard, and when your hair falls out in clumps, it downright sucks!

E.A. FEMALE: Uh, sure!

CHEERY MALE: Well, thanks to Moron Industries, we can help you. Frank, come on out! (At this point, a man comes on camera with what appears to be Velcro on his head.)

I think that if we taxed everybody who bought whatever product these people are selling, we could solve the deficit problem within a matter of months. "But Dan," you say, "if we just got rid of some unnecessary government programs, we wouldn't have to bring in more tax money." This is true, but there are some projects that we can't just cut.

However, there are a lot of things we can do without. For example, the program for Studying Snowflakes To Make Sure No Two Are The Same could probably be cut, along with the National Center For The Study Of Overweight, Blind But Sexually Active Hamsters And Their Effect On The Ozone.

One program that we should never cut is the Search. The Search is a top secret government program where we have been sending old reruns of Star-sky and Hutch out into space, the theory being that if there are aliens floating around out there, by God, they probably like a good car chase just as much as we do. We originally sent out old Jerry Lewis movies, but we got a message back saying, "Knock that crap off, or it's Shake-n-Bake for Earth," so that was that.

I hope the aliens DO come down to visit us here on planet Earth. Maybe they have a miracle drug. Maybe they have safe, plentiful electricity. Or maybe they're deer, in which case I'll need a bigger car.

sides, most high school seniors have never even heard of Wisconsin. Canada, however, will have a real football team, plus cheese out the wazoo.

Seriously, though, we do need to revise our tax system. Right now, our taxes don't really have any immediate effects that can be appreciated, other than it's just less money stupid people have to spend on Limited Edition Plates from the Franklin Mint showing the first episode of Webster: "Dick Butkus Takes Webster Into The Men's Locker Room For The First Time."

Speaking of stupid, why don't we start taxing stupid people? Jacobs Field in Cleveland was

Television corrodes society

Kill your television
-Ned's Atomic Dustbin

I am very dismayed by the large numbers of people, both on campus and in the real world, who mindlessly sit in front of the glowing shrine that is television.

That's not to say that television is all bad, but any good things that come out of it are overwhelmed by the avalanche of ill effects that sprout from your screen. If the entire nation was to stop watching television, this country would become more intelligent, freer, more prosperous and perhaps, even more just.

To start analyzing the bad effects of television, let's start with the most popular - also the most mind numbing - shows: sitcoms. One half hour of falsehoods, conformity and moronic laugh tracks. The most obvious weakness of these shows is that an entire plot takes place in this extremely short time. Problems are always resolved by the time the credits roll, and everyone lives happily ever after - until next week.

Network executives will tell you that we, the uncivilized masses, cannot pay attention for more than 30 minutes. But, if this is true, perhaps it is caused by having television shows that last one half hour. When was the last time a primetime series was aired where each episode lasted two hours long?

These same sitcoms perpetuate stereotypes and myths prevalent in our society. Conformity is the norm, with little variation from the standard, trivial problems of the "average" American family. Sure, there might be single mothers, or minorities, but if you look closely each character has a very one-dimensional personality.

Television could be very useful if you wanted to adopt the morals and values of the "average" American. While you're at it, you could move into the suburbs and have 2.5 kids. In the real world, no one is average, and therefore, in attempting to portray everyone, television portrays no one.

Guest Columnist

Mike Wendling

While on the topic of conformity: why is it that MTV never shows any fat or ugly people? Whole generations are growing up self conscious and with low self-esteem, and TV is a big part of the problem.

At the same time, these attitudes make us reject anything that isn't beautiful - according to TV standards. No matter how hard we try, we can't all look like Daisy Fuentes.

The basic concept of MTV is bogus. While listening to music, you can form images in your mind. MTV forms them for you. In essence, television is replacing your mind. An interesting prospect, to say the least.

Now, I must admit, I do watch TV once in a while, usually to remind myself of how stupid it really is. Last Sunday, for instance, I turned on the boob tube, hoping to watch my hometown Buffalo Bills maul the Carolina Panthers. It was not nearly as simple as pressing the "on" button, however.

The networks, in their eternal quest for green slips of paper, have divided up the pigskin pie, so that a maximum of two games are broadcast at a time. Of course, the Bills-Panthers contest wasn't one of them. As a result, I had to rely on the occasional updates that were oh-so-graciously provided.

Sure, I could get a real choice - and watch the Bills every Sunday - by buying cable or one of those nifty little satellite dishes, but for some reason I am loath to the idea of plunking down a semester's tuition just so I can get 243 channels with nothing on.

"Some people may claim that television is informative. These people point toward news shows. Well, there are just about three shows on network television that cover world events, again demonstrating lack of choice. Dan, Tom and Peter are all old white guys, and they all say pretty much the same things, for the same amount of time."

I can hear people saying "You get what you pay for," but again, this isn't quite the case. Television executives have done a good job of pretending that their services are free to the public. However, anyone who buys anything advertised on television pays, in the form of prices that are jacked up by inflated TV advertising costs.

While watching the aforementioned football game, waiting for the scores to briefly flash across the screen, I noticed that the broadcast was being sponsored by Windows '95. Everybody knows what Windows '95 is - it's the most hyped computer product ever. Hype is expensive, and television advertising is a big reason why you see Windows '95 "on sale" for $89.95 instead of the $20 it might be worth.

Some people may claim that television is informative. These people point toward news shows. Well, there are just about three shows on network television that cover world events, again demonstrating lack of choice. Dan, Tom and Peter are all old white guys, and they all say pretty much the same things, for the same amount of time.

In comparison, an average newspaper, biases aside, is a much more flexible and informative medium. You can read as much or as little as you want, and the comics don't come with laugh tracks.

Television is geared towards the lowest common denominator - the most intelligent network TV shows use about a seventh grade vocabulary. In other words, they hope to snare all of the idiots, and most of the smarter people.

Don't be fooled. Kill your television.

Dahmer's brain to be preserved for study

MILWAUKEE -- Jeffrey L. Dahmer's brain will remain available for possible research after his remains are cremated Sunday, the serial killer's mother said Saturday.

Joyce Flint of Fresno, Calif., declined in a Milwaukee Journal Sentinel interview to identify the funeral home which was assigned to handle the cremation.

Dahmer died Nov. 28 in the Columbia state prison at Portage. He and another convicted murderer from Milwaukee, businessman Jesse Anderson, were beaten to death by an inmate using a metal bar from gymnasium equipment.

Dahmer's remains have been in custody of a medical examiner while Flint and her ex-husband, Lionel Dahmer of suburban Akron, Ohio, discussed what to do with the brain tissue.

She wanted it preserved for research. He wanted all the remains cremated. They chose at last to have the body cremated to avoid storage fees, she said.

Dahmer, a chocolate factory employee, was arrested in Milwaukee after police found body parts in his apartment.

He was sentenced to life in prison in 1992, having admitted the deaths of 17 young men and boys. Many of the slayings involved cannibalism and homosexuality.

Flint said she considered running a death notice in the Fresno Bee about the cremation but did not want to attract publicity that might offend relatives of "those children," referring to her son's victims.

Then, deciding the cremation would become public knowledge anyway, she said, she agreed to an interview.

"I'm not even certain I have the right to say to the families that I grieve for their sons," she said, "but I do, just as I mourn my own son."

She said she has filed a wrongful-death suit concerning her son's slaying by inmate Christopher Scarver because "someone needed to take a stand and say that it was wrong to kill him. It's wrong to kill anyone."

Should the civil suit result in a reward, the money would be given to families of Dahmer's victims, she said.

She sympathizes with suits they have filed, seeking a court auction of Dahmer's belongings.

"In our society, the only lawful way for retribution is money," she said. "We live in an absolutely crazy society. I understand that this is the only way for them to vent their anger."

Judge Daniel George has scheduled a Circuit Court hearing Oct. 3 in Portage on disposition of the brain.

New currency will thwart counterfeiters

WASHINGTON -- American currency is about to get a face lift, a high-tech overhaul to thwart counterfeiters that will have holders of greenbacks seeing double.

Two portraits of an American historical figure will be on each bill, but you'll have to hold the bill up to the light to see one of them.

It will be the first distinct new look for U.S. paper money in 66 years.

The changeover will begin early next year with the $100 bill, a favorite of forgers. Existing bills will remain in circulation.

"We have an interest in protecting the integrity of our currency," said Treasury Under Secretary John Hawke Jr. "As technology develops the potential for more sophisticated counterfeiting, it gives us increasing cause for concern."

The most visible change will be to shift portraits off center.

An enlarged portrait of Benjamin Franklin will be moved to the left on the $100 bill, making room for a new watermark engraving. The watermark portrait, visible when the bill is held up to the light, is one of several new security features.

Officials said the watermark is extremely difficult to duplicate.

Eventually, there will be similar redesigns for the portraits on nearly all smaller denominations -- Ulysses S. Grant on the $50 bill, Andrew Jackson on the $20, Abraham Lincoln on the $10, and of course, George Washington on the $1.

The exception could be the $2 bill, which bears the likeness of Thomas Jefferson. No decision has been made on whether to alter the largely commemorative bill.

Treasurer Mary Ellen Withrow has said borders on the new bills will be simplified, with geometric designs replaced by an assortment of lines and dots that are intended to foil counterfeiters.

Also, color-shifting ink will be used so that the greenback will take on a different hue when viewed from an angle. And government printers may use computer-designed patterns that are made to turn wavy when copied improperly.

Akron rapist confesses

AKRON, Ohio -- A man has been arrested as a suspect in a series of rapes committed mainly in one of this city's neighborhoods.

David A. Bellomy, a 34-year-old metal worker, confessed to 14 rapes, two attempted rapes and a burglary, Akron detectives said Saturday.

Bellomy also confessed to an Akron Beacon Journal reporter in a telephone interview from the Summit County Jail, the newspaper reported Sunday.

"I did this. I wish I could change it, but I can't," Bellomy told the newspaper. "If there was a God, I prayed to him hundreds of times so I could stop. But no matter how hard I tried to stop, I couldn't. I'm glad it's over."

The arrest came after police renewed an investigation begun when a rapist struck in 1981 in the Goodyear Heights area.

Bellomy was under surveillance, and it was decided to stop him on a traffic offense Friday night, take him into custody and present him with the evidence.

He was to be arraigned at 9 a.m. Monday in Akron Municipal Court, Detective Bill Laughlin said Sunday.

Party school bans booze

Marco Buscaglia
College Press Service

KINGSTON, R.I. — Booze has been banned from the University of Rhode Island, a school which has taken top honors in the past as the nation's top party school.

Robert Carothers, the school's president, has banned alcohol at all school events. But URI students aren't sure he'll pull it off.

"How are they going to enforce it?" asks Dawn Salerno, a junior at the school. "If they think they're going to have cops at every party, they better hire a lot of cops."

Carothers announced the plan on the first day of classes, banning liquor from the school's infamous fraternity and tailgate parties.

"Binging with alcohol has reached alarming proportions, here and around the country," said Carothers when announcing the new policy. "We should not and we cannot hide from that reality any longer."

Students who break the policy will be punished with a $50 fine the first time and a $100 fine the second. A third infraction will result in a two semester suspension.

Despite the ban at school activities, URI students will still be able to stash their beer under their bed as the new policy still allows students over 21 to drink.

Speaker series begins with talk on Internet uses, cyberspace tour

Genell Pavelich
The BG News

The University's fall "Breakfast in BG" speaker series kicked off Friday morning in Olscamp Hall with a panel discussing the Internet and its different uses.

The program, "Getting on the Net: A Guided Tour of Cyberspace" included panelists Nick Gorant, coordinator of computer services at WBGU-TV; Deborah McLaughlin, associate director of public relations; and Scott McEwen, president of the Wood County Internet Council. The program's moderator was Bruce Klopfenstein, chairman of the telecommunications department.

Using state of the art technology, the panelists demonstrated how to access different Internet sites for the 250 people attending.

Klopfenstein said the Internet is a genuine media revolution through which people can communicate with one another and gain access to information.

"What is not on the Internet and World Wide Web?" he asked. "There is a lot of information out there to access."

Gorant said use of the Internet is growing at 40 percent a year.

"Nothing in the media world is growing at the rate Internet access and information is," he said.

He also said by the year 2000, 50 percent of households will have computers and more than half of those households will be on-line electronically.

Gorant also said many businesses are going on-line because it is another marketing tool. One third of the 5 million people using Internet have bought something on-line, he said.

McLaughlin, who is also coordinator of the University's World Wide Web site, said there are many pages of information brought to the Web including information about the University and its different departments, as well as calendars of events.

"This gives customized delivery of information to the audience because they can access what they want to see," she said.

McEwen said the Wood County Internet Council was formed in March. The all-volunteer organization came together to provide inexpensive access to the Internet for residents through a county-wide network called the Wood County Free-Net.

The Free-Net will be opened Oct. 15 and local residents can subscribe for $30. Information about the different communities in Wood County, schedules of events and job openings will be accessible through the system. There will also be an electronic yellow pages with local businesses listed.

"This will definitely make a difference in how people in Wood County communicate," McEwen said.

The "Breakfast in BG" speaker series is open to the public and is sponsored by the University's office of University Relations. The cost of the breakfast is $6 and reservations must be made ahead of time.

Norplant questioned

Study targets implant's effects on teenagers

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND -- Five years after the government approved the contraceptive Norplant, the distributor has started an inquiry into the drug's long-term effects, The Plain Dealer reported Sunday.

Researchers at Wyeth-Ayerst Laboratories asked for the study because of a lack of information, especially about the implant's effects on teenagers, the newspaper said, quoting corporate documents.

The company wants to track many side effects, including headaches, hypertension, bone loss, immune system disorders and irregular vaginal bleeding.

Margaret Weber, Wyeth-Ayerst's director of clinical development, confirmed the study's existence. She said it was "a way of enhancing our knowledge of a product, for looking at real world use."

She declined to be more specific. "We haven't announced the details to the public yet, and we're not prepared to," she told the newspaper.

She characterized the study as "commonplace" within the pharmaceutical industry.

A telephone call was placed Sunday to Wyeth-Ayerst's Radnor, Pa., offices. A security officer there said no one would be available to answer questions about the study until Monday.

Lisa Rarick, a U.S. Food and Drug Administration official who recommended approving Norplant in 1990, declined to discuss what, if anything, the FDA knew about the study. She cited promises to keep commercial information secret.

She acknowledged that "the pivotal trials we reviewed did not include teens," and she recalled being concerned about possible "differences in reporting of side effects" between foreign and U.S. women.

But she expressed no doubts about Norplant's safety or effectiveness.

"The company can have any concern they want, but at the FDA, looking at this, we felt -- it and still feel -- the information is compatible ... with a favorable risk-benefit ratio," she said.

Norplant consists of six small capsules that are surgically implanted under the skin of the upper arm to provide five years of continuous birth control. Nearly 1 million American women have used it since 1991.

But more than 200 lawsuits regarding Norplant have been filed. Allegations include inadequate warnings of such potential side effects as vaginal bleeding, headaches, nausea, dizziness and nervousness. Also, only trained doctors can remove Norplant, and some women contend their removals were botched.

Last month, the FDA said the contraceptive is safe.

Reforms hit hospitals

Conceptions for Medicare to cost Ohio caregivers

The Associated Press

CINCINNATI -- Republican proposals to reform Medicare will cost Ohio hospitals about $9 billion over the next seven years, the Ohio Hospital Association said.

Hitting on hospitals for savings is likely to cause reductions in staffing and services, or even close some hospitals, said Mary Yost, a spokeswoman for the association.

The shortfall between the actual cost of serving Medicare patients and reimbursement through Medicare was $259 million for Ohio hospitals in 1993, the organization told The Cincinnati Enquirer for a story published Sunday.

The Ohio State Medical Association said Medicare reform as currently planned could increase the number of doctors who opt out of Medicare and restrict patients' access to services.

"I think it is going to cause a number of problems," spokeswoman Carol Mullinax said.

Rep. Steve Chabot, R-Cincinnati, who during his campaign last year vowed to oppose Medicare cuts, pointed out that Republicans do not want to cut Medicare in absolute terms, just slow the growth in spending.

Chabot said he has developed a list of Medicare "principles" that he says will guide him in the upcoming debate about reform of the insurance plan.

Falcons overwhelm Akron, 50-12

Jon Rasbach/The BG News

Falcons' tailback Keylan Cates lowers his shoulder and plows through the Akron Zips' defense for some of his 189 yards of rushing in Saturday's 50-12 Bowling Green victory over Akron at Doyt L. Perry Stadium.

Niemet runs for three TDs, Cates rushes for 189 yards

Christian Pelusi
The BG News

After watching the Falcons crush the Akron Zips 50-12 Saturday at Doyt L. Perry Stadium, it would seem that no one could have written the kind of script for backup quarterback Bob Niemet that he performed -- unless you're head coach Gary Blackney.

The red-shirt freshman Niemet, starting for the injured Ryan Henry, handed the ball off for the first four plays from scrimmage. But on the fifth play, Niemet went up top and connected with wideout Eric Starks for a 51-yard touchdown pass to the deep post.

Ironically though, the strongest aspect of Niemet's performance was running the football. The Falcons' staff took advantage of Niemet's running ability by inserting more option plays, which resulted in Niemet rushing for touchdowns of 4, 6 and 4 yards on the day.

But the pass play to Starks set the tone for the rest of the game as the Falcons jumped out to a 33-0 lead they would never relinquish.

Blackney said in the post game press conference that his first 17 plays of the game are always scripted prior to the game and that the offense itself did not undergo many alterations because Niemet was starting and not Henry.

"The plays themselves didn't change. The run-pass mix changed," Blackney said. "We wanted to run a little more option with Bobby, which is what we did, because he is an excellent option quarterback."

As far as Niemet was concerned the day couldn't have gone better.

"Of course, everybody dreams," Niemet said, laughing. "But I try to stick to reality, go out and keep everything simple. I just wanted to go out, play ball and play the best I could."

Niemet's quote could probably cover most of the Falcon team's sentiments after the game.

The Falcons as a team ran for 397 yards on 65 attempts with tailback Keylan Cates leading the way with 186 yards on 31 carries. Tailback Courtney Davis added 88 yards on just six carries and Niemet ran for 53 on 11 attempts.

The 186 yards was a career high for Cates and was the best performance by a Bowling Green back since Darryl Story set the school record for yardage in a single game with 225 against Ball State in 1983.

Cates, who was coming off a slight shoulder problem incurred during the first game against Louisiana Tech, felt more comfortable Saturday.

"My shoulder was a little sore in the Missouri game, and it kind of played with me mentally," Cates said. "But I came into this week knowing that I had a lot of making up to do ... and the line worked real hard and they told me we were going to do it this week."

The ground game did step up their intensity, perhaps due to the increased load given to them by the coaching staff in the form of 65 attempts.

"Running backs love that," Cates said with a big grin. "I think the running game opened it up a little bit."

The Falcons domination of the lines, both offensively and defensively, were the keys to turning the game into a rout.

"I think we needed to get more physical in the offensive line after the Louisiana Tech game and we worked very hard this week at that," Blackney said. "Our pass protection has been good and I think the line is really starting to come together."

Meanwhile, the Falcon defense held the Zips to just 238 yards of total offense. Akron's average gain per play was only 3.4 yards.

"In the game against Missouri, we all kind of came together as a defense and it just carried over into practice this week," said free safety Orlando Rogers, who had an interception and a sack. "We know that we have to come into every game with our intensity level up, stay high and play good together."

"This team still has a lot of room for improvement, in my opinion," Blackney said.

No QB controversy in BG

Scott Brown
The BG News

Akron coach Lee Owens termed it "blown coverage". But for 15,083 fans at Perry Stadium, it could have been termed as the second coming.

Redshirt freshman Bob Niemet reiterated why he is Bowling Green's quarterback of the future Saturday against the Zips. Subbing for the injured Ryan Henry, Niemet threw a 51-yard touchdown on his first attempt and rushed for three more scores as the Falcons pasted Akron 50-12.

Niemet passed Gary Blackney's introductory course with flying colors.

"I'll have to go back and look at the game film, but right now I'd say he's Dean's List," the Falcon coach said.

Niemet's final numbers were not overwhelmingly impressive by themselves. He completed 6-of-15 for 113 yards while throwing two touchdowns, but he also rushed 11 times for 51 yards and three more scores.

Not bad for a player just three weeks past his 19th birthday, walking into a Division I game for the first time.

"When I first ran out, I was kind of nervous," Niemet said. "It was a weird feeling, but after that first play, I wasn't nervous at all."

Niemet surprised nearly every one of the 15,083 on hand at Perry Stadium when he dropped back for his first attempt and looked long down the middle for Starks, who had two steps on his defender. Niemet threw a perfect spiral. Starks pranced into the end zone and the rout was on.

"On that first pass, the coaches upstairs had read it," Niemet said. "He had been working all week on that because the posts up the middle were open."

The Falcons have scripted their first 17 plays of every game during Blackney's tenure. Although scripting a 50-yard pass for a redshirt freshman's first action was a little unusual, it also exemplified the confidence that the coaching staff has shown in Niemet since he joined the program last year.

"Bobby took just about every snap this week in practice," Blackney said. "He got better in practice every day. He proved to us his confidence and competitiveness, and his game experience today gives us that much more depth as an offense."

Blackney did stress that Henry would be back in the starting spot as soon as he is in full health, and that is expected this week when the Falcons take on Central Michigan.

Niemet had suspected that he may start since the beginning of the week, but found out for sure on Wednesday.

"I knew at the beginning of the week there was a possibility I might start," Niemet said. "Coach told me to prepare just as if I would start, and it worked out that way."

Falcon women comeback to oust Ohio in four sets

Jeremy Yohe
The BG News

A Long bus ride will make anyone a little sleepy. Bowling Green's volleyball team was no exception.

After making the trek to Athens, the Falcons' were a little slow in getting in game form.

But BG recieved a wake up call after dropping its first set 15-12 to Ohio University on Friday.

From there on, the Falcons' swept the next three sets 15-6, 15-4, 15-6 en route to victory over the Bobcats.

"We looked like we just got off the bus," head coach Denise Van De Walle explained about the teams lackluster performance early on.

Losing the first set, BG's middle hitters took control of the match.

"The difference came when our middles started to attack the ball aggressively and [OU] couldn't stop them."

The two middle hitters that led the comeback were senior Carlyn Esslinger and junior Lori Hilton. Hilton had a team high 24 kills, while Esslinger added 18 more.

Coach Van De Walle also felt great passing fueled the attack.

"All of our skills were very sharp. Our passing was so sharp we were able to run all of our options," Van De Walle added.

After the win, the team appeared to do an about-face in the next match on Saturday's match.

Miami of Ohio ambushed the visiting Falcons' and swept the match 15-4, 15-7, 15-7.

"Saturday was just a completely different look. We literally had very little offense," Van De Walle said. "We were always playing catch-up. Miami had all of the offense and we had none."

The lack of offense dropped Bowling Green to 1-1 for the first weekend of Mid-American Conference play. The team is 5-4 overall.

"We looked like we just got off the bus."

Denise Van De Walle
Women's volleyball coach

Preparing for next week, BG will be going back to the basics in practice.

"We need to work extremely hard in practice on our passing, hitting, and blocking," Van De Walle said.

Coach Van De Walle is still looking for a manager for the team. Anyone interested can contact assistant coach Mintzi Sanders at 372-7413.

Men's tennis places second at BG SU/Keefe

Chris Kapcar
The BG News

Despite poor singles and doubles play on Saturday and less than ideal weather throughout the whole weekend, Bowling Green's men's tennis team fought for a hard-earned second place showing at the BG SU/Keefe Invitational.

The surprise winner of the Falcon's invitational was Butler University, with BG again finishing second, and Western Michigan and DePaul bringing up the rear.

Head coach Dave Morin was disappointed with BG's dismal play on Saturday.

"We lost some matches we definitely should have won, and we just really played a little tentative and little bit on our heels throughout the whole day," said Morin.

According to BG co-captain Mark Ciochetto, the team seemed to drag during the matches on Saturday.

"This is my fifth year, and it [Saturday] was probably one of the worst days I've ever seen here," Ciochetto said.

The Falcons rebounded on Sunday morning, during which they won an impressive nine out of 10 points. Momentum seemed to be the key for BG, and this was gained with the crucial doubles win by Ciochetto and Milan Ptak and the tough victory which junior standout Joel Terman netted.

What happened to the team between Saturday and Sunday?

"Coach basically just told it like it was," Ciochetto said. "He told us what we had to do and what we weren't doing."

According to Morin, the deciding factor was a matter of willpower.

"The players had the mindset that they weren't going to lose no matter what. [Sunday] was great -- the players just willed their way through the matches," he said.

While Sunday's play was impressive overall, the Falcons did finish second. Morin felt that there are still some existing weakpoints for his team to work on.

"We still need to work on our depth, and while Terman played strong, we need some help from the middle," he said.

The final standings of the Keefe Invitational saw Butler with 63 points, Bowling Green with 55 1/2, Western Michigan with 49 1/2, and DePaul with 44.

Perfect score spurs women's cross country

Steve Wildman
The BG News

The only way to get a perfect score in cross country is to have all five of the top runners be from one team. Saturday, the women's cross country team did that and more as they had the top six runners in the race. This gave Bowling Green a perfect score of 15 to win the Tom Evan's International.

"This is the first time that I have had a perfect shutout in my coaching career," head coach Steve Price said. "This is rarity. It is like bowling a 300 -- you don't see it very often."

Bowling Green participated in a dual meet. They took on Kent where BG won, 15-46. Bowling Green also beat Akron, Case Western, John Carroll and Walsh College. Tracey Losi put in another great performance as she won the race with a time of 18:17. This is coming off a week when she was voted the MAC Female Scholar Athlete of the Week. Dating back to last season, Losi has won seven out of the last nine races.

"Tracey didn't feel well yesterday. She trailed behind Kristin Gaddis for most of the race, but she caught up with her and won the race," Price said.

Senior Gaddis came in second with a time of 18:18. She finished one second behind Losi.

Sophomore Missy Lyne finished third with a time 18:39. Senior Suzanne Isco's time of 18:46 gave her a fourth place finish. Junior Renee Strayer placed fifth with a time of 19:02, and junior Laura Hall had a sixth place finish with a time of 19:04.

This race and good finish was important for Hall. She is coming back from an ankle injury.

"This is the first race that Laura has ran since last cross country season. We are seeing gradual improvement," Price said. "She has been an All-MAC runner for the last two years, and she will be again this year."

Price realizes that he won't

Browns dispatch Oilers, 14-7

Defense allowed team to escape with win

Michael A. Lutz
The Associated Press

HOUSTON -- About the only thing that made the Cleveland Browns happy was, they left town with a victory.

Stevon Moore carried the day with three first-half interceptions, and Vinny Testaverde threw a 35-yard touchdown pass to Michael Jackson with 9:17 to play, leading Cleveland to a 14-7 victory over the Houston Oilers Sunday.

"I thought we got outplayed, Moore set up that touchdown with an 8-yard interception to the Oilers 28. His first interception stopped a drive at the Browns 22, and he also grabbed a deflected pass for an interception at the Cleveland 1.

"We got out with a win," Cleveland coach Bill Belichick said.

The Oilers (1-2) tied it with Furrer's 4-yard touchdown pass to Haywood Jeffires, who made a leaping catch with defender Don Griffin hanging on his waist with 2:43 gone in the fourth quarter.

Testaverde, who hit only 2-of-11 first half passes, needed only three minutes to give the lead back to the Browns.

He set up the score with a 29-yard pass to Keenan McCardell to the Oilers 36 and finished the game hitting 10 of 23 passes for 147 yards and two touchdowns.

Furrer, making his second NFL start, was booed in the first half but wound up completing 22 of 41 passes for 258 yards and four interceptions as a replacement for starter Chris Chandler, sidelined with a bruised left shoulder.

"The interceptions were a hard problem," Furrer said. "But today, like other games, it seems to be one one play or one series we'll have one guy break down, the quarterback, a guard or receiver."

"It's easy for you guys to get frustrated for us saying we're close, but we see the tape and we know."

The Browns (2-1) came into the game hoping to victimize Houston's ailing defense that played without starting middle linebacker Al Smith and free safety Marcus Robertson.

Instead, Moore picked on Furrer.

"They say sometimes things come in bunches," Moore said. "The interceptions were great hustle plays on my part. That's what the defense is supposed to do, get points off turnovers."

The Browns used Moore's second interception of the game to set up Testaverde's 15-yard touchdown pass to McCardell, who got behind but the bottom line is what's on the scoreboard," Browns defensive end Rob Burnett said. "Defense, that's the strength of our team. We've got big shoulders, we can handle it."

Moore picked off three passes from backup quarterback Will Furrer in the first half,

"We have tougher meets coming up and we will keep training hard, but I think with these last two victories have sent a message to the rest of the MAC who should be number one," Price said. The men's team beat Kent in their dual meet but finished second overall behind Akron. Bowling Green did finish ahead of Mount Union, Marshall, Kent,

George, OSU down Huskies

John Seewer
The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio -- Bob Hoying and Eddie George have been around long enough to know they've got to take what the defense gives them.

The senior leaders of the Ohio State offense combined to account for four touchdowns Saturday in the Buckeyes' 30-20 victory over Washington. Both players found several holes in the same Washington eight-man defensive front they found so formidable last season in Seattle.

A year ago against the Huskies, Ohio State fell behind 22-0 in the first half and never recovered, losing 25-16.

Experience was the difference this time. The win raised the Buckeyes two notches in the Associated Press Top 25 poll released Sunday, to No. 8;

Washington dropped from No. 18 to No. 22.

Hoying, a third-year starter at quarterback, picked apart the Huskies' defense with short passes. He finished with 192 yards and two scoring throws.

The touchdowns came on a 22-yard pass to fullback Nicky Sualua and a 6-yard bullet to flanker Terry Glenn. He attempted only one pass, a bomb that fell incomplete, longer than 25 yards.

"We tried to test them one time ... we just had to rely on the shorter passing game and it was pretty successful," Hoying said.

The Buckeyes mixed up the run and the pass, finishing with 259 yards on the ground and 192 yards in the air.

"Against that eight-man front they try force you to throw the ball, but we were fortunate today that we could do both," Hoying said.

George, who took over as the starting tailback last season, looked impressive while piling up 212 rushing yards and two touchdowns.

"I think I've improved as far as reading blocks and with my second effort," George said. "I think the experience from last year helped me a lot."

During most of the first half, George found lots of running room up the middle. But as Washington's defense adjusted, George went to the outside and broke a 51-yard run that set up his seven-yard scoring run and put Ohio State ahead 23-7 in the second quarter.

"I was basically taking what they gave me," he said. The Huskies noticed.
